"Easy Does It"

One of the most useful of the sayings that have been adopted in A.A. is that which advises, "Easy Does It." So universally workable is this good advice that it qualifies as the expression of one of the fundamental steps in personal rehabilitation.

If this particular saying is applied sincerely and intelligently, it will greatly ease the path of the newcomer in A.A., avert "slips" and further the development of a mature life both inside and outside A.A.

Axioms are only words in themselves, of course, and the phraseology has become trite in many cases. Pseudo-intellectuals are especially scornful of old sayings, and even less snobbish observers may overlook the worth to be found in the meaning behind the words.

For example, "Easy Does It," means - relax! Don't fret and worry and stew and struggle! Take it easy! Relax! Everyone who has an intimate knowledge of the alcoholic will agree that one of the first things he needs to do is to relax, not only in the early stages of A.A. but forever after and a day. "Easy Does It" applies no matter how long one has been in A.A. and, in fact, it is essential to continue progress in A.A. and to a return Old Harmony School Strathmore, CA to more normal living outside.

Physical realization has long been identified as a characteristic of great athletes. The DiMaggios and the Williams have an easy swing that belies yet accounts for much of the power of their bats. The fastest of swimmers relax with each stroke. In football, the relaxed player is less prone to fumbles and injuries. The great runners have a relaxed stride even when they are driving the hardest. Relaxation frees the intellectual, the emotional and even the spiritual functioning of the personality no less than it loosens the muscles of the body.

"Easy Does It" for the newcomer during those first early days of confusion, fear and doubt. If, instead of worrying and "tensing up" because he does not grasp the whole A.A. program in the first sitting - if he will relax, he will find that the emotional understanding as well as the intellectual understanding of the A.A. philosophy will come along much more readily. Fortunately, this is a saying which can be tested easily. It does not have to be accepted on faith alone. Anyone can find out for himself whether it works simply by trying it himself.

Suppose a problem has arisen. Suppose it is the old urge to reach for the bottle. Or suppose the problem is one of those by-products of alcoholism which continue to come up long after the urge to drink has gone. The reaction of the alcoholic, and of more than a few nonalcoholics, is to fight the problem, to worry about it, to get into a stew. The tension begins to mount. Emotion runs wild. Self control is slipping rapidly. That's the usual sequence. It can be broken if in the midst of it, the victim sits way back, physically and mentally, and relaxes. First he must relax his muscles, because that's the easiest to do. Then he must relax his mind, by directing his thoughts to pleasant subjects, to a reminder that others have succeeded and so can he, to mental pictures of peace and success. If he will but direct his mind away from the problem, he will find a new source of strength rising up within him. At least that is the way it has worked and still works for others. The individual who has learned how to relax has already advanced a long way towards happiness and success. Relax and enjoy A.A. Relax and enjoy life. "Easy Does It." If you don't believe it, try it.

One of my favorite A.A. speakers, Sandy B., describes the Twelve Steps as, "Twelve principles, spiritual in their nature...that we don't want to do." This was certainly true for me when I arrived at A.A. I was a daily drunk and had tried everything I could think of to stop-and failed. Alcoholics Anonymous was a last chance that I wasn't even sure I wanted. The main reason I was willing to give it a try was that my daughter had called an A.A. member to "Twelve Step" me, and I wanted to honor that. She took a great risk in making that call, because I was not a nice person when drunk, and she didn't know what might happen. As it was, God gave me just enough willingness to get started in recovery, although I didn't realize it at the time. The ego deflating, soul- searching work of the Steps was difficult and unpleasant. I did not want to do it, but I didn't want to drink again either, so I struggled through. I had thought that the Fourth Step would be the worst of it, but then arrived at Step Nine. This was no theoretical work; I was going to have to make face-to-face amends to the people I had hurt the most in my drinking life, which spanned 38 years. Step Nine is logistical. I had my amends list from Step Eight. Now I had to decide priorities, places and times. With guidance, I broke things down to "now", "later" and "never". When I decided who came first, I then had to be specific about what I was making amends for, and what I was going to do differently. The "now" and "later" categories were based on geography. Since the amends were to be done in person, the closer they lived to me, the sooner I made the amends. If there was travel involved, I would do it as soon as practicable. There was one that had to be done by phone, since he lived across the country. I had to be careful of the "never" category. The wording in the Step, "whenever possible" and "except when to do so would injure them or others" can be excuses for not making an amends. There were only two people in my "never" category. One was dead; so I prayed on that. The other was an old girlfriend that I had no contact with for about thirty years. She had dumped me because I drank too much, too often. We parted on amicable terms, but our six-year relationship had been chaotic. There was no doubt that I had caused her much harm. But how would she feel if this drunk of an ex-boyfriend called her after all this time and suggested we meet for coffee so I could make an amends? I decided that it would be pretty creepy, (like a stalker) and decided not to do it. I did not want to disturb her peace just to check off an amends.

It took me eight months months to finish all of the amends on my list. While there was relief in this, my work was not done. Part of the amends process is for me to show those still in my life what I was going to do differently, so that I would not be a repeat offender. This "living amends" is one of the great joys of living in recovery. It lets me be the person I always wanted to be with those I love. In this way, many obstacles to a spiritual awakening are removed. Step Nine, for me, was also a big stride forward towards that seemingly elusive and sought-after quality- emotional sobriety.

Mark G.

"A.A., as such, ought never be organized; but we may create service boards or committees directly responsible to those they serve."

dition How do I write about a tradition that just doesn't make sense yet is beautifully orchestrated and sustained throughout the test of time in A.A. history? Think about it... tradition nine's main purpose is for people from diverse backgrounds working together to ensure that the still suffering alcoholic can get the A.A. message for their lives. It has been my experience to hear the reading of the short form traditions but I really like the last two sentences in the long form of the tradition which reads, "They derive no real authority from their titles; they do not govern. Universal respect is the key to their usefulness." Who do we respect? We respect the still suffering alcoholic and the alcoholic who has transformed to living sober. Collectively as a group of people with wide ranges of differences we come together with a common bond- we are drunks who surprisingly left our suffering for sobriety and we deeply care for each person strapped to the insane life of alcoholic bondage. Recently I started to serve on an A.A. service board, Central Office, and I thoroughly enjoy it. Although, at first I had many jitters because my A.A. experience in California is belonging to a closed women's group where I feel safe and comfortable. My women's home group cycled from big to almost extinct to big again. Once we became bigger more experienced members felt we needed a C.S.R. and it was time for me to get out of my comfort. So I became the C.S.R. volunteer for our group. Walking in the Central Office door I was met with smiling, glowing people with different backgrounds or maybe I'm the one with the different background from them but you know what...it doesn't matter because we share the bonding similarity of wanting to help the still suffering alcoholic like we once were. Quickly I experienced that together came great respect for one another as we work with sincere hearts and common purpose. We want our Central Office to be a branch of communication to help anyone suffering. We also know by coming together and serving we receive the greatest gift for our own lives... another day in sobriety. I have learned by serving what tradition nine stands for: Tradition nine simply is a selfless tradition that still uplifts self.

Lighter Side of AA

WE ARE NOT A GLUM LOT

A scientist runs into an AA meeting and exclaims "we did it! We found a medical cure for alcoholism! All you have to do is take this one pill daily and you are cured." Slowly a hand raises in the back and a man says "what happens if you take two?"

Did you know the game show JEOPARDY was invented by a newcomer? Who else would start with all of the answers and none of the questions?

A drunk staggers into a Catholic Church, enters a confessional booth, sits down, but says nothing. The Priest coughs a few times to get his attention, but the drunk continues to sit there. Finally, the Priest pounds three times on the wall. The drunk mumbles, 'Ain't no use knockin, there's no paper on this side either.'

Editor's Corner

Hello All! It's officially my third month as the new editor and I really appreciate the opportunity to be of service! I would like to redouble my efforts to bring in more content to the newsletter...so PLEASE help me out!! I am interested in content about unique meetings in our area like the "Traditions Meeting." Also, more content about central office like the "Birthday Club". Please help me out! Feel free to send any questions, comments, or content to:
